Under the industry 4.0 paradigm, the industrial sector is being taken to another production level. What appeared to be an elusive, futuristic scenario, will start quickly producing results. It will be important to guide industrial change & guiding companies toward success, thereby making sure that efficiency objectives, delivery and meeting other factors.

In manufacturing industry, only limited use is made of manufacturing systems that can be an advantage in increasing experience through cost saving. In future production, other physical systems integrate, as well as energy and information by multiple uses, thereby, increasing the long-term performance.
